Your Guildhall

Your perfect venue in the heart of the City
History of the Guildhall

The Guildhall is steeped in history, with dramatic architectural features that provide an impressive setting for any function, whether it's a formal dinner, party, community group, or meeting. Our dedicated and professional team will ensure that your event runs smoothly.

The Guildhall is a Grade II listed building located in the heart of Plymouth City Centre, its distinguished town hall design and combination of old and new is nationally significant, whilst the striking tower provides a landmark within the city. The Guildhall was built 1870-1874 by Norman and Hine of Plymouth, the winners of a competition judged by Alfred Waterhouse with artistic direction by EW Godwin. The north front has freestanding statuary and carving by H Hems, and relief allegorical panels by Boulton of Cheltenham, with carving also by Trevenan of Plymouth. The building was reduced to a shell during the Blitz and the part containing the municipal offices was subsequently demolished, the rest was re-roofed, restored and reopened in 1959.

Paton Watson and Patrick Abercombie, in their Plan for Plymouth, an ambitious plan for the reconstruction of the city following the devastating bombing of World War II, envisaged a Beaux Arts planned city with a central axis focused on the Guildhall tower. After surviving the threat of demolition by a single Council vote in 1951, the Guildhall was seen as the focus of Plymouth's rebuilding and as perhaps the most significant survival from the bombed city centre. It was one of the few damaged buildings that was restored rather than rebuilt. The design of the new civic area was masterminded by HJW Stirling, who was appointed City Architect in 1951. The restoration of the Guildhall, which was undertaken in 1951-59, involved the stabilisation of what remained of the original building and the construction of new roofs, entrances and interior.
The Great Hall

At the heart of the Guildhall is the stunning and unique...

The Great Hall

Complete with its wood panelling, stained glass windows and period chandeliers, The Great Hall is an elegant venue and will ensure that your event is one to remember!

The Great Hall has capacity for 820 people with a balcony for additional or VIP seating, making it one of the largest venues in the South West. Over the years it has hosted many famous performers including Status Quo, Queen and Julian Lloyd Webber. Fourteen stained glass windows line the sides of The Great Hall and they depict notable moments in Plymouth’s history and a large tapestry at the front of the hall shows the ‘Miraculous Drought of Fishes’.

A range of events and functions can take place in The Great Hall, it’s most popular use is for grand gala dinners, beautiful weddings, and celebration events such as graduations and proms.

The Great Hall’s location at the heart of the City Centre makes it both accessible and perfect for exhibitions, conventions, business events and fairs which benefit from the passing city footfall. The Great Hall can be dressed to suit the atmosphere and mood of your event and our helpful staff will be there to assist every step of the way.
